Into New Fields

Coincident with the beginning of a new year (and a new decade), Goshen College made a new departure into the fields of linguistics and anthropology. Byron Bender joined the college faculty second semester and for the first time Goshen now has a full-time professor in these fields.

Bender is probably the only person in the Mennonite Church who is academically qualified to teach linguistics and anthropology. He received his graduate training at Indiana University and the University of Michigan.

Among his courses this semester are "Descriptive Linguistics," which is being offered in the seminary, and "Cultural Anthropology" and "The Language and Peoples of Africa," which are offered in the college.

The Bender family recently returned from a period of service in the Marshall Islands. Beginning as a teacher in the island schools six years ago, Byron advanced in responsibility so that during his last two years he served as Educational Administrator of the Marshall Islands and Linguistic Consultant for the whole trust territory.

During his stay on the Marshall Islands, Byron was busy studying the Marshallese language. One purpose for these studies was to collect data for a doctoral thesis based on these Marshallese studies which is to be submitted at Indiana University.

His linguistic studies had other helpful results as well. They served well in the improvement of the Marshallese school system. One of Byron's projects was the establishment of a small print shop for preparing textbooks in the local vernacular.

Another helpful side line was his occasional consultation with a Protestant missionary translator who was working simultaneously on a new translation of the Bible in the Marshallese language.

Byron graduated from Goshen College in 1949; he received his master's degree at Indiana University in 1950 and is presently a candidate for the doctor's degree at IU. He also studied for one semester at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Dean Carl Kreider (r.) confers with Byron Bender who is now serving as Assistant Professor of Linguistics and Anthropology.

Goshen Choruses Release Record

"Sing Ye to the Lord," is the title of a new long-playing record being released this month by the Goshen College A Cappella and Collegiate choruses.

The record is named after Bach's motet for double chorus which occupies a large part of the first side. A total of 17 works are recorded, however, including one composed by a Goshen College graduate, Richard Nase '59. His work, entitled "It Is Finished," is sung by the A Cappella Chorus.

Produced by RCA, the record is available at the college bookstore for $3.98.

Faculty Research

Arthur A. Smucker, Professor of Chemistry at Goshen College, has set out to accomplish something which has never been done before. And the United States Public Health Service has given a research grant of $21,358 to help him along.

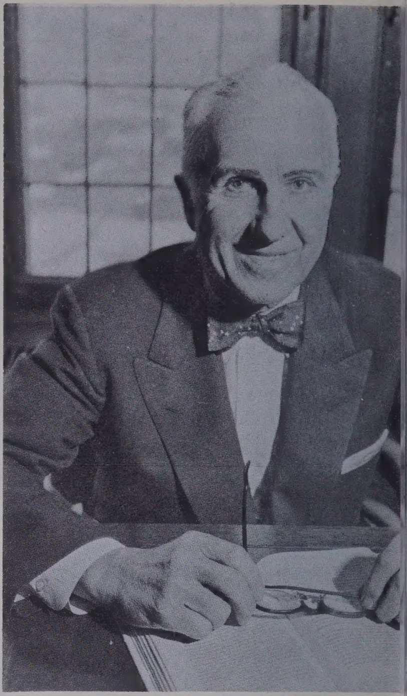
Smucker's object is to isolate and study a certain body chemical—an enzyme called maltase. This is a substance found in the small intestine of the human and many animals. It plays an important part in the digestion of carbohydrates.

While maltase is known to exist and some of its characteristics have been described, the enzyme itself has never been isolated for careful study. To isolate this enzyme is a difficult and tedious task on which Smucker has already been working for about two years (with a grant from the Research Corporation).

If he is once able to isolate the enzyme maltase, he will be in a position to study it in detail, thus adding to man's basic fund of knowledge about his own body.

The $21,358 granted by the Public Health Service is to be used over a three-year period. It provides for the purchase of research equipment and for a part-time salary allowing his release from some teaching duties. He is also assisted in his work by several Goshen students.

Professor Smucker graduated from Goshen College in 1949 and returned to join the faculty in 1953. He earned his master's and doctor's degrees from the University of Illinois in 1951 and 1954.



Henry Hitt Cran

Professor Arthur Smucker directs a research program in an attempt to isolate and study a body enzyme—maltase. A $21,358 grant from the United States Public Health Service assures that the project, already two years old, will continue for another three years.

If you do not make a will, the state in which you live will do it for you after you are gone. But the state will not include your church or Goshen College when it makes your will.

A Spiritual Landmark

The Goshen College community passed a significant spiritual landmark during the Peace Emphasis Week in December. It was a landmark, without doubt, because of the clear and moving way in which the spiritual issues of our time were laid bare before students and faculty.

On hand for the occasion were two of Christendom's leading peace spokesmen: Henry Hitt Crane and André Trocmé. Dr. Crane has been a peace leader within American Christendom for many years, while Trocmé has fulfilled a similar place in Europe.

The outlook presented by these thoughtful and well-traveled leaders was not bright. The world has gone mad over war. More of the world's people are lacking the basic necessities of life than ever before. More are in spiritual darkness.

"The tragedy of this modern moment," said Dr. Crane in an evening address, "is that the power we possess is hopelessly irrelevant to the purpose we profess." We want peace and well-being, but the military and cultural powers of our time have proven themselves hopelessly ineffective in reaching this goal. It can be reached only by the power of God and the power of love, Crane affirmed.

His final words called for a new kind of Christian obedience. "The time has come," he said, "when you've got to stop this self-seduction by virtue of verbalisms whereby we talk about God and say we believe in Him but repudiate Him at the crucial issue as to whether or not we will obey Him."

André Trocmé of France struck a similar note when he accused Christians of waging, not a cold war or a hot war, but a "sitting war"—or in the words of that Biblical parable where a wicked servant wrapped his talent in a napkin, he called it a "napkin war."

History is in a state of emergency, Trocmé declared. Christians in such a world are to be "impatient" and "industrious" for the kingdom of God.

Speaking on the last day of the conference, John Howard Yoder of the Elkhart Mission Board considered the response which must follow such penetrating messages.

"We can if we wish," he said, "settle back into our routine . . . and go on with a little better intentions and make our compromises a little more uneasily and try to be faithful a little more often and support a little more the committees that are supposed to be dealing with these things.

"If that is what we do," he added, "this week will mark for all of us a landmark—on a downward path.

"If we have, on the other hand, heard what the Spirit is saying, this must issue in a new commitment. Every one of us," he said, "must rethink the investment of his life."

Describing the conditions under which this might be a landmark on an upward path, Yoder called for a "more direct connection" between our vocational and study plans and "what we should be doing about the hunger of the world and the fear of the world."

'I Am The Truth'

Second in a Series
by President Mininger

In this article our theme is Jesus' claim, "I am the truth." Jesus came not only as the Saviour to bring "life," but also as the "truth" to interpret life.

Christianity and learning have had an interesting relationship in their journey together through history. They have often been in conflict with one another. Down through the years many pious and sincere persons have rejected human learning as a threat to their faith. On the other hand, there have been many scholars, intellectuals, and wise men who have depreciated Christianity as a mere superstition.

In the face of these conflicts, the Christian college represents an attempt to bring Christian faith and learning together in a harmonious relationship and in a way which will be of mutual benefit.

That this is no easy task should be evident from the fact that many colleges have set out to realize this goal only to end in failure. Sometimes they have tried so hard to be strong academically that they have forgotten to be Christian. Other colleges in seeking to be Christian have failed academically.

But Goshen College has been established on the conviction that faith and learning can be and must be brought together.

One of the most brilliant studies that has been made in recent years of the problems of higher education is called "General Education in a Democratic Society." It was prepared by a group of faculty members at Harvard University. There are many interesting and helpful things in this study. But two of their findings are extremely disturbing to those of us in a Christian college. First, they say that at one time Christian faith was the unifying center for the whole program of education. And then, with just one brush of the hand they throw it aside and say this is no longer possible. Secondly, they say we must now find the unifying principle for education in the traditions of a democratic society.

Goshen College, however, believes that we can find our unifying principle, not in the nation or the traditions of a democratic society, but only in Jesus Christ. In His person, His purpose, and His work, we can find this unifying principle for our educational program. He is the Truth.

In Him we find meaning for the natural sciences. Paul says that all things were created by Him and for Him, and by Him all things hold together.

Certainly, it is also in Him that we find the true understanding of man and society. He is the unifying principle for all the social sciences.

Again in the humanities we must look to Christ as the clue to unity and meaning. Only as we bring modern culture under the judgment of Christ, will we be able to know which elements to keep and develop and which to discard.

Our relationship to Christ is the basis for uniting all separate studies and research, giving meaning to the whole educational program. To make this a reality is our task at Goshen College. It is a task of knowing the Truth and of maturing in our insight into the meaning of life as it is lived under Christ.

Completes Doctoral Work

John Oyer, Associate Professor of History, has completed all requirements in his doctoral program at the University of Chicago and will receive the Ph.D. degree this spring. His thesis is entitled, "The Writings of Lutheran Reformers Against the Anabaptists."

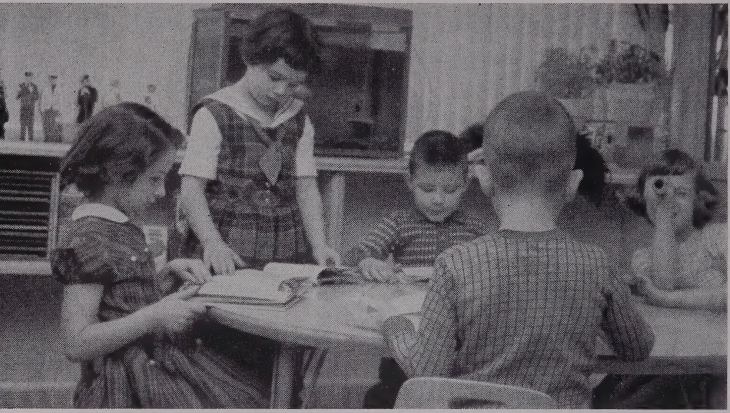
A Laboratory School



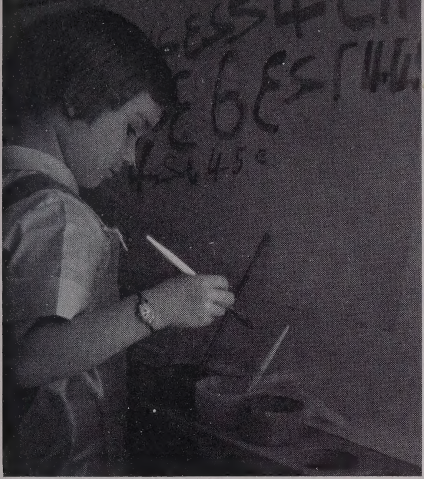
Kindergarten pupils in Goshen's laboratory school examine and handle books in a "reading readiness" activity. College students observe the kindergarten activities from behind a large panel of "one-way" glass.

Student assistants, drawn from the Teacher Education department, gain valuable experience by working with these lively and interesting youngsters.

Now in its second semester, Goshen's new laboratory kindergarten is adding breadth and interest to the Teacher Education program. Twenty pupils (many of them from faculty homes) are registered for both the morning and the afternoon sessions of the kindergarten. It all adds up to a busy schedule for the teacher, Miss Eby, and her student assistants.

Among the features which make this school room a little different from an ordinary kindergarten is a large panel of "one-way" glass marking off one side of the room. To the youngsters it looks like a mirror. But interested Teacher Education students on the other side can see through it with perfect clarity, thus giving them a chance to make close observations without molesting the classroom atmosphere.

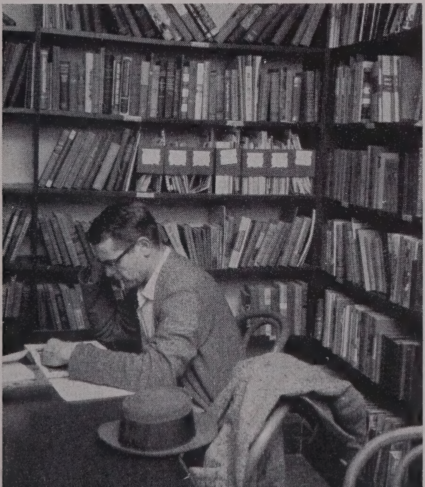
Teaching in the laboratory school is Esther Eby, formerly of Lititz, Pa. She graduated from Goshen College in 1949, and received her M.A. in Elementary Education at Temple University last summer. Since her student days at Goshen Miss Eby has served two years in France and Belgium working in children's homes under the Mennonite Central Committee. Then she returned to this country and served for several years at the Kansas City Children's Home.

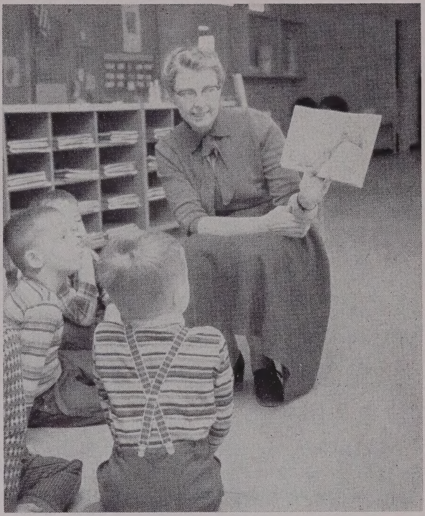


Learning to write her numbers with a paint brush helps one young learner build finger muscle dexterity.

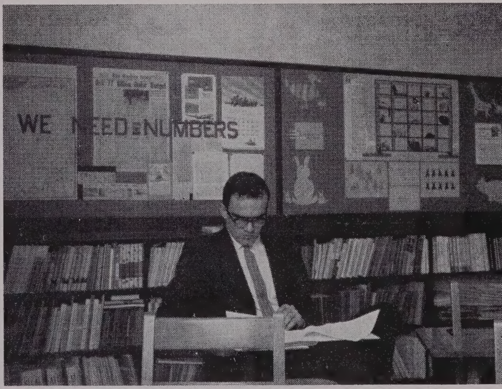
Vera Good, assistant professor of education, is director of the laboratory school. Modern classroom facilities have been provided for the school in the northeast corner of the new Church-Chapel building and in years to come the school may be expanded to include other grades.

An obvious advantage of the school is the opportunity it gives students for systematic observation of a kindergarten classroom. The Teacher Education Department also benefits through opportunities for experimentation with educational practices and materials.





Esther Eby, formerly of Lititz, Pa., is the teacher in Goshen's new laboratory school. She received her master's degree at Temple University.



Observation in the laboratory school does not do away with good hard work in the library as might be judged by the preoccupation of these two Teacher Education students.

Youth Forum

Started only last year, the "Youth Forum" at Goshen College has already proved itself as an effective stimulus for student thinking. The Forum meets about once a month on Sunday evening.

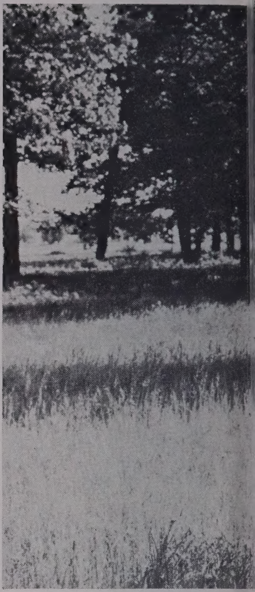
Youth Forum was conceived to provide opportunity for students to talk about the things which students really want to discuss. A bold attempt is made to approach the important issues of life from a student viewpoint.

"Complacency on the Campus," stirred more student reaction than any of the other topics considered this year. A vigorous discussion carried over into the popcorn party which was held after the Forum closed.

Earlier in the school year, students were challenged to do some thinking for themselves when presented with a philosophical debate on "The Existence of God."

Issues in the realm of "International Relations" were presented to the Forum at its last meeting by members of the International Relations Club.

Leading the Youth Forum in a discussion of International Relations is a panel of students from Formosa, Germany, Jamaica, Canada, U. S.



A Vision for Service

Two Goshen alumni are providing leadership for the development of a new mental hospital in Elkhart. Robert W. Hartzler 41, and Edward P. Mininger x36, are Chairman and Assistant Chairman of the Oaklawn Psychiatric Center, now under development.

An attractive, 18 acre site has been secured just outside the Elkhart City limits and construction is expected to begin this summer.

The Center will provide facilities for the work of two "psychiatric teams," each composed of a psychiatrist, a psychologist and two psychiatric social workers. A number of qualified persons have already expressed interest in the new Oaklawn Center and the Board is in the process of assembling its professional staff.

Several unusual programs will be offered at the Center in an effort to make "out patient" care more practical, less costly and more effective. Some patients, for example, will be able to keep on working at their regular jobs. When they get off work in the evening, they will come to the Center for help and stay overnight. Other patients will spend their daytime hours at the Center but go home to be with their families in the evening.

Besides a treatment center, Oaklawn is also envisioned as an educational center. This will be of interest to Goshen students, especially those studying in social work, nursing or in the Seminary.

Chairman Robert W. Hartzler is pastor of the Eighth Street Mennonite Church in Goshen, while Edward P. Mininger, the Assistant Chairman, is a well known doctor and obstetrician in Elkhart. Melvin Glick 40, a doctor from Eureka, Ill., is also on the Oaklawn Board, and H. Clair Amstutz 33, is Chairman of the sponsoring body—Mennonite Mental Health Services, Inc.

Personals

William A. Stoltzfus 17, is in his 22nd year of service with Beirut College for Women in Lebanon. For many years its President, he resigned only last year to give his time to its financial support as Secretary for College Relations. The school has an enrollment of about 450 students, mostly from Arabic speaking countries.

After serving 40 years as a minister in the North Indiana Conference of the Methodist Church, L. M. Hile 22, has retired to less demanding responsibilities as the minister in a small community church in Parlier, Calif. Their present location gives them easy access to the nearby Kings Canyon and Sequoia National Parks.

Music for physically handicapped children is the subject of research being conducted by John Bixler 52, at the State University of Iowa. He received his master's degree from the University last August in the field of Music, with a minor in Special Education. Besides studying for his advanced degree, he also teaches part-time at the Universit

Faculty Publications

The Days of My Years by Sanford C. Yoder is the most recent in a formidable list of books and pamphlets that have been written over the years by members of the Goshen College faculty. Released on the author's 80th birthday, the book reflects the highlights of his eventful lifetime. As might be expected from a former President (1923-40), and Bible Professor (1940-50), he has many discerning observations about Goshen College.

The completion of the Mennonite Encyclopedia is a 3,800 page achievement to which several faculty members made a major contribution, especially Harold and Elizabeth Bender, J. C. Wenger and Melvin Gingerich.

Besides these, Herald Press has also published: How God Heals—Paul Miller; Biblical Revelation and Inspiration—H. S. Bender; Following Christ in Our Work—J. Lawrence Burkholder; and The Ecumenical Movement—John H. Yoder.

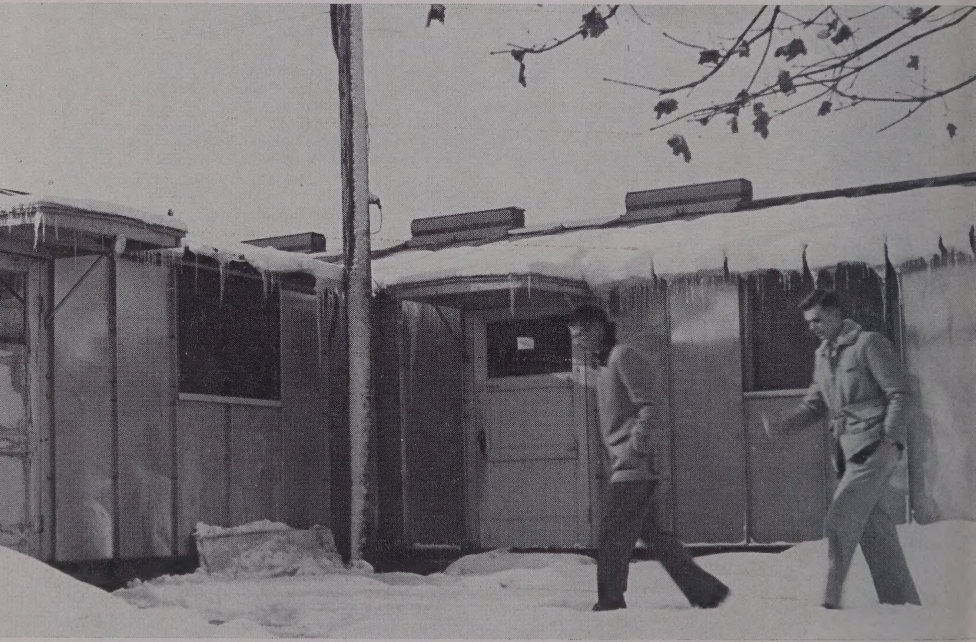
Remember When . . . . . .

Do you remember when "The Quad" was a campus institution at Goshen? Surely you do—at least with the help of that whole new body of folklore which was inspired by what took place in those two, unassuming dormitory rooms (40 fellows in each room, of course).

While reviewing tales of former valor, several veteran residents of those intriguing barracks hit upon the idea of a reunion for "Quad Alumni." Would the memories of all that happened within those old tin walls be strong enough to bring people together for a long week end this summer? A reunion could be held at some convenient campsite, probably during the latter part of the summer.

This is the idea. Are you former Quad residents interested? If so, write to Ralph Lugbill, Archbold, O.

The Quad—"20 degrees cooler inside," and "noted for its wall to wall flooring."



GOSHEN COLLEGE BULLETIN

New: One-Year Theology Curriculum

GOSHEN COLLEGE has announced a new curriculum for seniors who want an extra year in theology and Biblical studies.

The purpose of this fifth-year program is to provide better theological training so that students can participate more effectively in the life of the church. It will also furnish an excellent background for those who plan to go on into graduate or professional training.

Tuition discounts will be granted to students in the one-year theology curriculum on the same basis as those who are regular Seminary students.

A certificate will be awarded to those who complete the 30-hour program.

Henry Weaver, Jr., Associate Professor of Chemistry, will direct the program of "Research Participation for Teacher Training" at Goshen College this summer.

New: Summer Research for Teachers

FOUR HIGH-SCHOOL chemistry teachers will spend ten weeks on the Goshen campus this summer in a new program of "Research Participation for Teacher Training."

Henry Weaver, Jr., associate professor of chemistry, will serve as director of the program which is supported through a $6,145 grant from the National Science Foundation.

The four teachers will spend most of their time in the laboratories at Goshen College working in direct research, using literature, conducting experiments, and interpreting results.

Through a series of lectures and seminars they will also come into contact with various research scientists from nearby industries such as Miles Laboratories, in Elkhart, Ind., U.S. Rubber Co., of Mishawaka, Ind., and Dow Chemical, of Midland, Mich. This will give them a grasp of the many approaches used in research.

It is hoped that the research experience and the exchange of ideas and experiences will stimulate the teachers to better classroom work.

The NSF grant provides for the salary of the four teachers during their stay in Goshen.

Developme

Administrative officers from Goshen College and Hesston College have spent much time in working out the details of a co-operative program (l. to r.): Paul Bender, Tilman Smith, Paul Mininger, and Carl Kreider.

Two IMPORTANT administrative developments have been taking shape in recent months. Both hold the promise of better things yet to come.

On the one hand, a number of specific proposals have been worked out to further co-operation between Goshen College and Hesston College. Both schools are operated by the Mennonite Board of Education and have been of help to one another throughout their history. The new plans aim to strengthen and enlarge this cooperative effort.

In another promising development, a Board of Overseers has been appointed by the Mennonite Board of Education to assist in the administration of the College. The Overseers will be responsible to implement the general policies of the Board of Education as they apply specifically to Goshen College.

They will:

- Recommend, together with the Executive Committee of the Board of Education, the person to serve as President of the College.
- Effect an internal organization best suited to promote the welfare of the church and College.
- Advise and assist the faculty in maintaining a strong religious spirit on the campus.
- Pass upon the qualifications of candidates for appointment to the Goshen faculty.
- Be responsible for the general financial management of the school.
- Recommend plans for major expansion of plant and facilities.
- Assist the President in fund raising and public relations.

Plans for the Goshen-Hesston cooperation have been outlined in a brochure published by the two colleges and now being circulated to prospective students.

By attending both Hesston and Goshen, the student is able to broaden his educational experience and take advantage of the particular strong points of both schools. Hesston gains by her standing with Goshen, a four-year college, and Goshen gains by the students who transfer from Hesston.

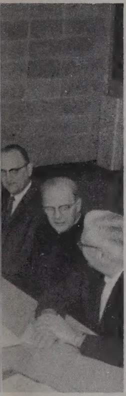
To allow maximum flexibility in arranging a program at both colleges, Goshen will accept up to 75 credit hours from Hesston (instead of the usual 60 hours accepted from other schools). The Menno Simons scholarships will also be honored at either college.

Goshen has announced a new "Sophomore Year at Hesston" program, in order to encourage students to take advantage of these opportunities.

All these students, now attending Goshen College, are alumni of Hesston College. Through joint planning being done by the two schools, this group of transfer students will likely grow in years to come.

ts in Administration

A brochure announcing plans for closer co-operation between Goshen and Hesston colleges is now being circulated by the two schools.



New Board of Overseers (l. to r.): Norman High, Lancaster, Pa; Orrin Smucker, Plain City, Ohio; Charles Hoeflich, Philadelphia, Pa; Alta Erb, Scottdale, Pa; Harold Zehr, Roanoke, Ill; Howard Yoder, Wooster, Ohio; Dwight Yoder, Akron, Pa; John Mosemann and C. L. Graber, Goshen, Ind.

"I Am the Way"

Third
in a series
by President Mininger.

"I AM THE WAY." This is Jesus' description of Himself.

He is not only the object of our faith ("the life"), and the source of all meaning in human experience ("the truth"). But Christ is also "the way." He is the guide for our conduct. He claims not only our hearts and our minds but also our wills.

For this reason Goshen College does not limit itself only to cultivating personal faith or to developing sound learning. We also assume some responsibility for guiding the values by which students live.

Many colleges and universities today do not assume this responsibility. Some educators think student morality is none of their business. According to this widespread view, personal value judgments are the responsibility of the home and the church, but are of no concern to an institution of higher learning.

On the other hand there are many educators who are deeply concerned about the values of students, but they have given up all hope for making a real impact in this area. They would like to exercise responsibility for the values by which students live, but they find it impossible to do so. They think it impossible.

At Goshen College however, we have not surrendered. We believe that faith, learning, and conduct belong together. And we try to keep them together.

How does Goshen College seek to accomplish this goal? How do we encourage Christian discipleship? First, we constantly seek to keep a clear vision of Christ before each student. We seek to strengthen their devotion to Him. We endeavor to help each student find in the extension of Christ's kingdom the purpose for his own life.

We also try to help students become aware of the values by which they live and to help them select those values which express the Spirit of Christ. Of these values which guide the individual as he makes his decisions, love stands out as the most important. This is the ability of identification with others, of being sensitive and responsive to human need.

We also seek to develop the students' critical powers. This helps them respond to moral situations with discernment rather than merely following their impulses or imitating the group in an uncritical way. We want our students to become free, and one is not free if he merely follows his impulses or imitates the crowd. Evaluation and choosing are important.

During the students' life at Goshen College, we hope to expose them to some of the important issues of life that call men to decision. We want them to confront these issues—it may be in the classroom, in a counseling situation, or just in the practical life of the college campus. But wherever these issues are confronted, Goshen College seeks to help its students as they discuss the moral values involved and as they weigh the factors upon which a decision must be made.

All this we do because Goshen College wants its students to discern the Spirit of Christ. We want each student to discover for himself that Jesus Christ is the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

Quality in Nursing Education

Emphasis at Goshen falls heavily upon a broad general education.

NURSING EDUCATION at Goshen College is undergoing significant changes and improvements according to a report from Professor Verna Zimmerman who heads the School of Nursing this year while Orpah Mosemann, the school's regular director, is pursuing advanced studies at Indiana University.

A new curriculum for nursing education has been put into effect for sophomore students this year. Next year, changes will be extended to include the junior-year studies, and by 1961-62, the new curriculum should be in full force.

Emphasis in the new program is to provide a broad introduction to the major nursing concepts through lower-level courses and then to use upper-level courses to provide richness and depth to these concepts.

Nursing on the college level lays a broad foundation which prepares for direct patient care, and with additional preparation makes possible rapid advancement to fill the needs for teachers, supervisors, administrators, and consultants.

Miss Mosemann and two other faculty members will return to the campus this fall after having been absent for a period of graduate study. Bernice Rupp will return with a master's degree from Teacher's College at Columbia University, and Eva Beyers returns with a master's degree from Boston University.

Miss Rupp specialized in Public Health Nursing, and Miss Beyers, in Maternal and Child Welfare. Both fields will receive emphasis in the new curriculum.

Janice Luckenbill, a GC graduate of '59, will also join the faculty this fall after a year of experience in the school of nursing at Cornell University Hospital (N.Y.).

Goshen nursing students return from clinical experience at the Elkhart General Hospital.

In Language and Literature

A Good Year

1959-60 has been a stimulating year in the Division of Language, Literature and Fine Arts at Goshen College.

An inter-departmental course was organized this year by John Fisher, Associate Professor of English, and Mary Oyer, Professor of Music. Upper level students majoring in English and Music are meeting together this semester for a series of conjoint lectures on the subject of 19th Century Romanticism. Besides Fisher and Oyer, seven other professors were scheduled to give lectures on various aspects of the Romantic movement. The course has given students a much broader, more interesting perspectlve on Romanticism than it would have been possible for any single professor to present.

In Goshen's new Language Laboratory students can pick up a pair of earphones and hear tape recorded lessons in either German, French or Spanish. Listening is especially helpful for first year students.

The Creative Writing class broke new ground during the first semester when they published a 66 page book as a class project. Dave Oplinger, a senior from the Goshen area, served as Chairman of the publication venture. Helen Friesen provided the illustrations, both line drawings and silk screen, and Shirley Gerig served as Layout Editor. The entire class contributed to the volume which contains 46 poems, short stories and essays.

Professor S. A. Yoder provided inspiration and supervision for the publication project, and the book was printed in the College printing office. It is entitled: Inkunabula (which means "cradle period"). The book has drawn favorable comment from a number of college campuses where English teachers and students have had a chance to see it.

For those studying foreign languages, the most important change this year was the creation of a new Language Laboratory on the third floor of the Administration Building. The Laboratory is equipped with a large number of booths where students may pick up a pair of earphones and listen to their instructor repeating sentences and phrases for them to learn. The tape recorded lessons are in German, French and Spanish.

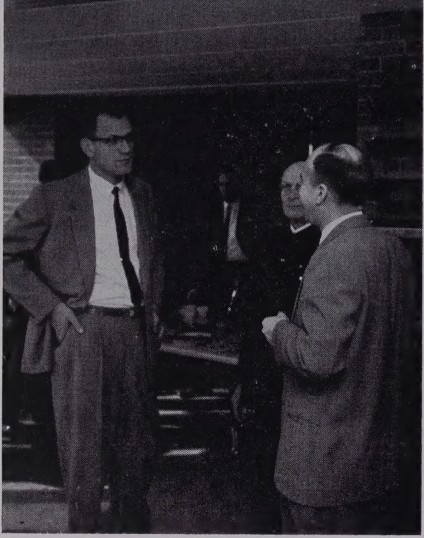
Each student spends two one-hour periods in the Laboratory every week. Although a "Tower of Babel" effect often develops when students are repeating phrases in three languages, the Laboratory has proven itself as a definite advantage, especially for first year students who need to hear the spoken word as well as see it on the pages of their text books.

Another milestone for the Division of Languages, Literature and Fine Arts was the acquisition of the Loebe Classical Library. Its 400 volumes now fill a shelf the full width of the library reading room. And they give students direct access to nearly every major literary work in the Classical Period—from the beginning of Western Civilization to the fall of Rome. Published by Harvard University Press, each volume has both the original Latin or Greek text along with its English translation. The entire set was purchased for about $1150.

Goshen College has built up, over the years, a good record in forensic activities and this year is no exception. Goshen's debate team brought home the First Prize Cup from a Novice Debate Tournament at Anderson College.

Looking over the list of this year's forensic winners it is interesting to see how many are sons and daughters of GC alumni. First place in the Men's Speech Contest went to Eldon Kreider, son of Don 38 and Elda (Hostetler) 37 Kreider, Chicago, Ill. Roy Umble 35, Professor of speech, had the pleasure of seeing his daughter Janet take top honors in the Women's Speech Contest.

First place in the Freshman Men's Speech Contest went to Robert Brunk, son of Ivan 35 and Anna (Jennings) 36 Brunk, Evanston, Ill. Winner in the Freshman Men's Peace Oratorical Contest was John Paul Wenger, son of John C. 34 and Ruth Wenger of Goshen. And Nancy Gerber, daughter of Ross L. 33 and Ruth (Hertzler) 35 Gerber of Smithville, O., was Goshen representative in the Indiana State Oratorical Contest.



Calvin Redekop (l.) addressed the MHS at its recent meeting.

Mennonite Historical Society

Meeting on Sunday afternoon of March 27, the Mennonite Historical Society considered a lecture presented by Calvin Redekop '49, professor of sociology at Hesston College. Redekop's lecture, based upon his doctoral studies at the University of Chicago, stirred sufficient interest that discussion meetings were scheduled on Sunday evening and again on Monday evening to consider the subject further. He spoke about the "sect cycle," calling for a new understanding of this sociological concept which is often used to analyze and understand the life of religious groups.

Each year since its re-organization in 1924, the Mennonite Historical Society has sponsored three or four lectures of this kind, presenting various aspects of Mennonite life and thought. Earlier this year, S. F. Pannabecker, dean of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Elkhart presented a centennial review of the history of the General Conference Mennonite Church. Members of the Society also had the privilege this year of sitting in on a pre-publication viewing of a new documentary film on the Amish.

Besides its lecture and discussion meetings, a major contribution of the Society has been the publication of the Mennonite Quarterly Review. Started in 1927, the Review is now recognized as the leading English journal for scholarly articles on Anabaptist-Mennonite history.

The MHS has also helped to build up the collection of books, micro-films, manuscripts, photostats and pictures in the Mennonite Historical Library.

Church-Chapel Dedication

Dedication of the new Church-Chapel building took place in three special services on Sunday, April 3. Principal speaker of the day was Paul Erb of Scottdale, Pa., who presented messages in the morning and evening.

"The church we dedicate today is a unique building," wrote Harold Bauman, Pastor to Students, in a Dedication folder prepared for the occasion. "Essentially it is a circular sanctuary placed inside a square of educational facilities. The circular arrangement of the sanctuary provides face-to-face seating, suggesting the unity of brotherhood. The projection of the pulpit into the midst of the congregation reminds the worshiper of the centrality of the Word and the importance of its message. The cross and the living vine serve as constant reminders of the death and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. The simple, strong materials without facade and the fulness of light are expressive of firm truth and the full light of the Gospel."

Cleveland Alumni

Goshen College alumni from the greater Cleveland area gathered for a fellowship meeting on April 1, (no April fool). The thirty alumni who were present had such a good time they decided to meet again next year and elected Arthur 50 and Jocele (Thut) 50 Meyer to plan the next meeting.

Vern Miller 50 is pastor of the Lee Heights Community Church which provided facilities and food for the meeting. An entertaining program was presented by three alumni speaking on the theme, "As I remember Goshen College." "Goshen College 1960," was then portrayed with a set of slides from the College. Speaking about how they remembered Goshen were: Allen Y. King 22, Gertrude Gossmann Dress 49, and Marilyn Liechty 57. Glen Miller 58 served as Toastmaster and Gerald Hughes 54 led in group singing.

Personals

Theron Schlabach, a Goshen senior majoring in history, has been accepted as a Fellow of the Danforth Foundation, St. Louis, Mo. The Danforth Foundation provides tuition and a stipend for living expenses to cover the entire period of graduate studies for the Ph.D. degree. Schlabach will enter the University of Wisconsin this fall to major in American History. Daniel Leatherman, a GC graduate of '58, is also a Danforth Fellow.

Since January, Dr. James Steiner 53, has been working in a mission hospital in Thailand. Located in Prae of north-central Thailand, this one hospital serves an area containing 300,000 people. No wonder the Thai doctor who was at the hospital just before the Steiners arrived had a physical breakdown from overwork. Mrs. Steiner is the former Mary Ellen Wolber x55.

Political unrest and tribal warfare in the Belgian Congo have been "very real" to several Goshen alumni serving in that country, according to reports from Sara Friesen 53, and Ellis 48 and Edna 48 Gerber. Missionaries located in the trouble spots were "kept busy transporting refugees, trying to keep peace and caring for the wounded."

In Memoriam

Cecil K. Bender, Goshen, Ind., died April 7, at the age of 53. A GC graduate of 1929, he earned his M.D. degree from Northwestern University in 1933, and practiced medicine in Goshen for 25 years.

Derk Tieszen, a former instructor in physical science at Goshen College 1928-30, died on January 22, in a Colorado Springs hospital. He had moved to Colorado Springs, Colo., last year after retiring from the faculty of the State University College of Education in Albany, N. Y.

Samuel G. Winey, former superintendent of buildings and grounds at Goshen College, died in Goshen on April 3, at the age of 83.

Carol Jean Roupp 56, of Hesston, Kans., has accepted a two year secretarial appointment with the Foreign Service Staff of the U. S. Department of State. She is participating, at present, in a six-months orientation program in Washington, D.C.

Glendon 58 and Reitha Klassen, formerly of Mountain Lake, Minn., are nearly three-fourths of the way through a year of language study in Costa Rica. They are going to strife torn Colombia as missionaries under the General Conference Mennonite Church.

Dr. Edwin K. Rian will present Goshen's commencement address this year.

Commencement at Goshen College

Dr. Edwin H. Rian, president-elect of Biblical Seminary in New York, will present the commencement address at Goshen College this year on June 6.

Dr. Rian has just completed a six-year term as president of Jamestown College, Jamestown, North Dakota. He is well known as a Christian educator, having served as vice-president of Beaver College in Jenkintown, Pa., vice-president of Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas and lecturer at Princeton Theological Seminary.

During his administration at Jamestown, the college grew rapidly, with enrollment increasing 63 percent and the college budget by 91 per cent.

Dr. Rian has studied at Princeton University, the University of Minnesota and the Universities of Berlin and Marburg in Germany.

GOSHEN
COLLEGE

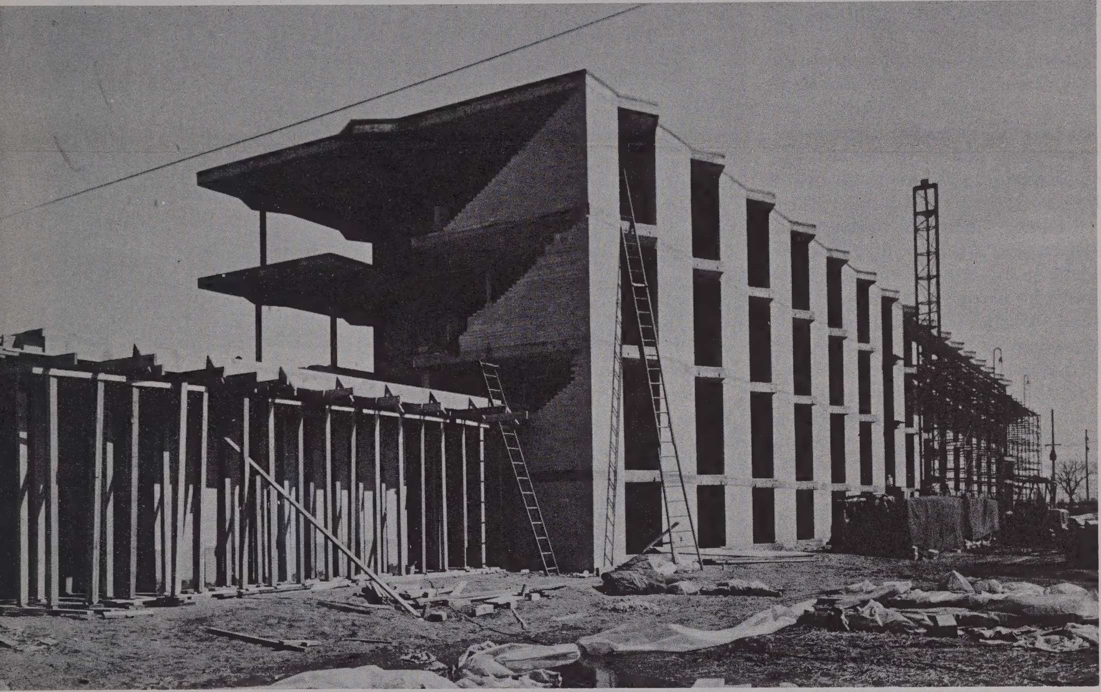
Ready by September



When school starts in September, 200 men will have the privilege of moving into new rooms in the C. Z. Yoder Hall at Goshen College (pictured above).

The four-story building is more than 200 feet long and 38 feet wide. It has been especially designed so that the primary social group will be 28 men. On each of the top three floors a service area and social room divides the floor into two rather distinct units, each with facilities for 28 men.

Thus the social advantages of smaller dormitories are preserved. And at the same time, financial savings will be realized by building and administering one dormitory for 200 men rather than two dormitories for 100 men.

An apartment and office for the head resident are located on the first floor, along with a recreation room and kitchenette, a storage area, laundry room, public lounge, and living facilities for 30 men.

The completion of this large new dormitory will bring major shifts in campus population. Coffman Hall, previously the main dormitory for men, will be remodeled and used for women's housing. Several small off-campus units used for men's housing will be vacated.

*The Challenge of Building

"Build it well
whatever you do,
Build it straight
and strong and true,
Build it tall
and build it broad,
Build it for the eye of God."

* Quoted by Atlee Beechy in the ground-breaking service.

Church Music Conference

AN IMPORTANT Church Music Conference—the first of its kind ever sponsored by the College—was held May 20, 21 under the joint direction of the Goshen College Music Department and the Biblical Seminary.

Music leaders and ministers from forty churches in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ontario, Ohio, and Pennsylvania attended the conference. And their response to the conference discussion was almost uniformly enthusiastic.

Professor Chester K. Lehman of Eastern Mennonite College served as the guest resource person. His opening address on "Music in Worship," laid the foundation for later discussion of specific issues and problems.

Bringing together the music faculty of the College and the music leaders of many local congregations resulted in a stimulating exchange. The congregational representatives were greatly enriched through a multitude of specific suggestions on how they could improve the music program in their local churches.

A significant number of students also participated in the conference, bringing the total registration to more than 100.

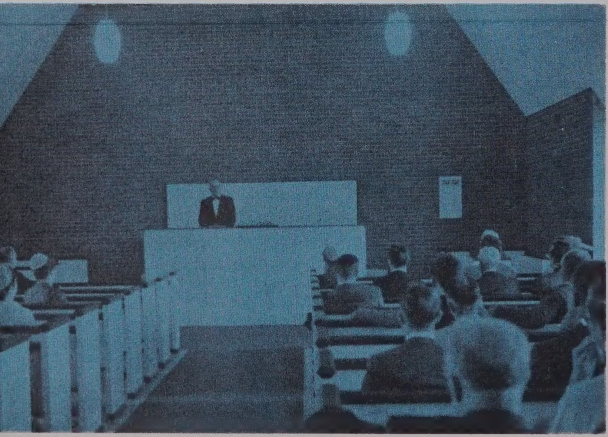
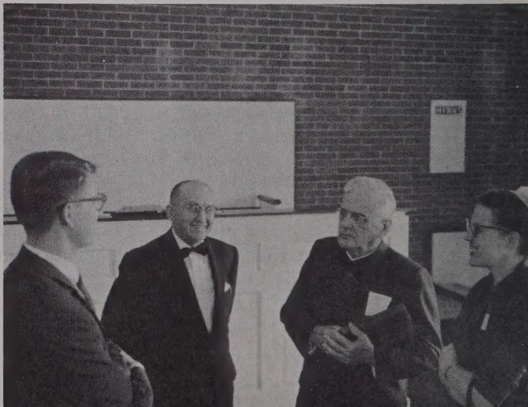
Harold S. Bender addressed the sectional meeting for ministers.



A report from the Music Committee of General Conference was presented by Walter E. Yoder.



Among the leading participants in the conference were (l. to r.) James A. Miller, Walter Yoder, Chester K. Lehman, and Mary Oyer.

Goshen College And the Sunday Schools

Goshen College faculty and alumni have played an important role in the growth and development of the Sunday-school movement among Mennonites. It is fitting therefore that the Sixth Mennonite Church-wide Sunday School Convention should be held on the Goshen campus, August 4-7.

The importance of this role can also be seen by the large place that Goshen faculty and alumni occupy on the convention program. For example, of 66 institutes and workshops scheduled during the four-day convention, nearly fifty will be directed by Goshen alumni.

The Convention Director, J. J. Hostetler of Peoria, Ill., is also an alumnus, as is the Worship Leader, John M. Drescher of Marshallville, Ohio.

Another alumnus, Paul M. Lederach of Scottdale, Pa., will present the new Graded Sunday School Materials which have been produced under his leadership.

1960—Largest Graduating Class

Goshen's graduating class this year was bigger by far than any other in the school's history. It is 50 per cent larger than last year's class.

Just fifty years ago Goshen granted its first four-year degrees to a class of five persons—quite a contrast to the 214 who applied for bachelors' degrees this year.

Study Alumni Achievement

Karl Massanari, Goshen's Director of Teacher Education, is making an extensive study of all Goshen alumni who are teaching school or have taught in the past.

The purpose of the study is to provide information about what alumni teachers are doing, what further training they have received, what their accomplishments are, and their future aspirations.

"We believe," says Massanari, "that we can learn something about the effectiveness of our teacher education program by studying the product."

It is hoped that the study can include all Goshen College alumni who are teachers. Any who did not receive a Professional Data Form are urged to write for it immediately. And those who already have their form but did not yet return it are encouraged to do so.

PRESIDENT MININGER SAYS:

Quality and Quantity In Christian Education

At Goshen College we are determined to maintain and improve the quality of our Christian higher education, even while we are preparing to serve a larger number of students. Although educational quality may be endangered during a period of growth, increase in numbers does not necessarily mean a reduction in educational effectiveness.

Some of the essentials to a quality program in education are the following:

1. Clearly formulated objectives that are understood and accepted by the entire faculty, students, and constituency.
2. Able and highly motivated students.
3. A carefully planned and well-executed curriculum.
4. A competent and dedicated faculty.
5. Adequate building and facilities, including laboratories and library.
6. A community of Christian learners with whom the student can identify himself and in which his individual needs are met.
7. A frequent examination of the educational product in the light of the educational objectives and a constant re-evaluation and improvement of the educational program.

By giving careful attention to each of these essentials we believe that we can have both quality and quantity at Goshen College during the years ahead.

"What kind is it?" ask Auduboners on an afternoon bird hike.

All About Birds

On April 30—May 1, the Audubon Club of Goshen College made its annual trek to the Brunk Cabin for a weekend of birding in the Michigan woods.

The weather failed to co-operate on Saturday evening, but by Sunday morning only a few fleecy clouds remained. The Auduboners loaded down with bird books and binoculars were out on the trails by six-thirty, in spite of the chilly air.

Thirty species of birds were identified by members of the club, including a pair of wood ducks, a solitary sandpiper, and the rarely seen sora rail.

Also included in the weekend were fellowship and worship experiences. Saturday evening each one shared a favorite poem or Bible passage and on Sunday morning Professor Frank Bishop of the Biology Department brought the morning message.

This outing climaxed a year of activities for the Audubon Club, including a bike hike, an illustrated lecture on birds by the Herbert P. Storcks of Ft. Wayne, Ind., a study of nature materials, films on James Audubon and the whooping crane, a lecture on warblers by S. W. Witmer, professor emeritus of biology, a trip to the blue heron colony near Waterford, Ind., a bird-feeding program, and a number of late afternoon and early morning hikes.

The Audubon Club was organized at Goshen College about thirty years ago. Its objectives are: to stimulate interest in bird study; to attract birds to the college campus; and to encourage the protection of bird life in the community.

Edith Herr, assistant professor of physical education is the faculty sponsor, while Paul Bixler, a senior from Orrville, Ohio, served as president during the year.

Some original poetry was written during the weekend of May 1, including the following by Shirley Gerig:

BIRD HIKE

Come with me
To the woods today
And we'll see the great blue heron
Stand gracefully among the lily pads.
We'll watch the phoebe on her nest
And the chipmunk gaily scamper to his hole.
We'll see the hawk glide
Through the air with ease.
And the kingfisher catch his prey.
We'll watch the swallows swoop
And the redwing flash his colors.
We'll learn from nature along the winding path as we listen to the woodpecker plying his trade.
Come with me today to the woods—
And we'll watch the birds
In May.

Checking campus bird feeder for the Audubon Club are Paul Bixler (l.) and Angie Maniaci.

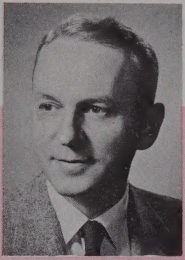
Faculty: Coming and Going

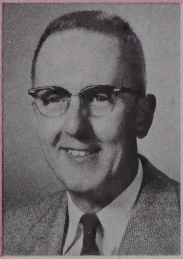


Atlee Beechy
To: India

Vera Good
To: New York

Ralph Gunden
To: Michigan

Lester Zimmerman
To: Illinois



Six persons will join the Goshen College faculty this fall, four are going on leave, and five returning from leave, according to the latest report from President Mininger. All the new faculty members are former students or graduates of Goshen College.

Among the newcomers is Carl Metzler, who just finished two years of graduate study at the University of Virginia. He will serve as assistant professor of mathematics.

The English Department has secured the services of Frances Stieglitz, who recently earned a master's degree at Purdue University and has been teaching in the public schools of South Bend, Ind.

Janice Luckenbill and Norma Jean Weldy are coming to teach in the School of Nursing. William Zuercher is returning from a period of MCC service in Germany to be Goshen's assistant business manager and co-ordinator of student scholarships.

Dan Leatherman completes the list of new faculty members. He will teach part time in the field of political science and will also be enrolled in the Goshen College Seminary.

Atlee Beechy, dean of students, will be on sabbatical leave during the 1960-61 school year, and has been granted a Fulbright Lectureship in India. He and his family are now on their way to India where he will teach in the graduate school of Allahabad University.

Lester Zimmerman, professor of agriculture and mathematics, has been awarded a National Science Foundation fellowship to study at the Institute of Mathematics at the University of Illinois.

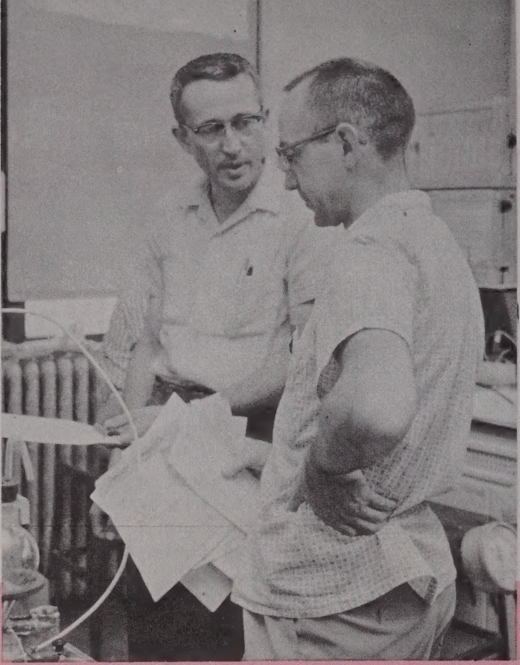
Ralph Gunden, the business manager, is also on sabbatical leave and plans to study at the University of Michigan.

Vera Good, who teaches in the fields of psychology and elementary education, has been granted a leave of absence to continue her studies at Columbia University Teachers College.

Those returning after a period of absence are Orpah Mosemann, Eva Beyers, and Bernice Rupp all of the School of Nursing, Phyllis Roose, the director of food services, and Leland Bachman of public relations.

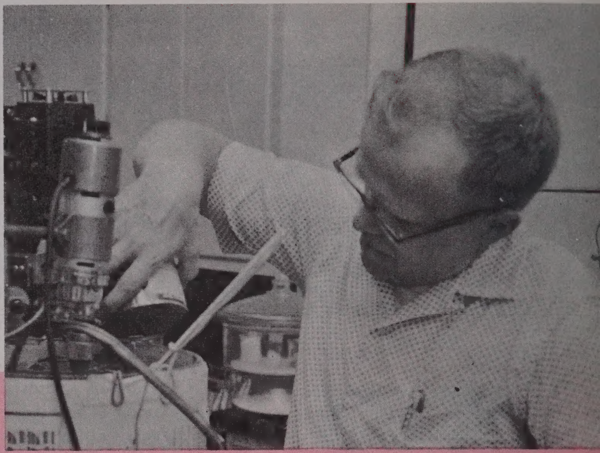
J. Howard Kauffman, who has been teaching at Goshen College since 1948 in the field of sociology, was awarded a Ph.D. degree by the University of Chicago in their June graduation ceremonies.

Reflections from



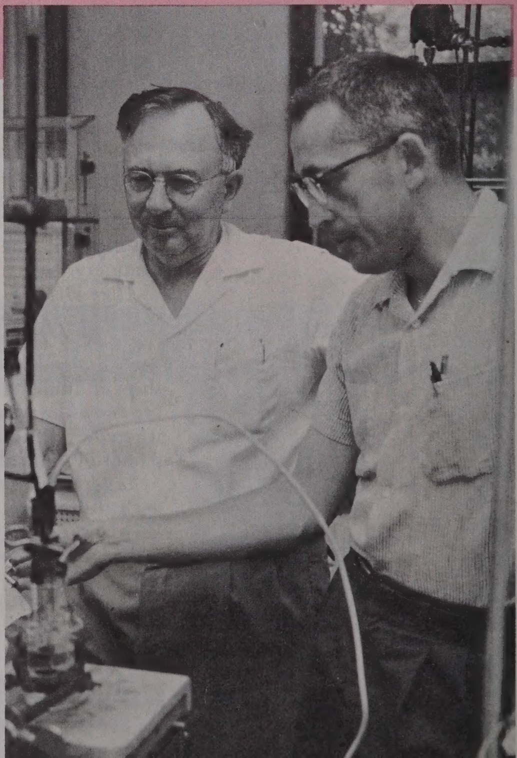
Faculty members, Henry Weaver (l.) and Arthur Smucker, confer about the latest developments in their summer research project.

Ken Hoober (below) is one of four student assistants who are participating in the research along with the visiting teachers. The research lab is obviously a very busy place.

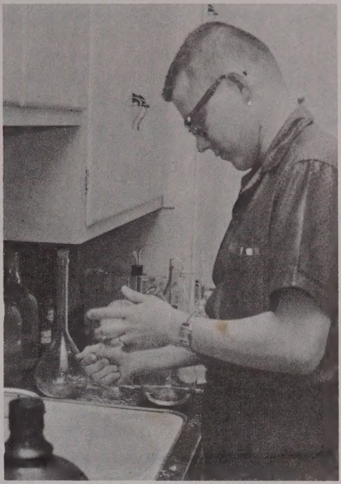


Lowell Knoop, a teacher from Warsaw, Ind., tends a cooling operation in a research project designed to isolate the enzyme maltase.

One of the participants in the summer research work is D. D. Driver (l.), a teacher for many years at Hesston College. He is working with Prof. Weaver in an effort to measure the speed with which iron and thiocynate react.



Summer in Research



John Leffel of Bremen, Ind., is one of four teachers giving full time this summer to the research program directed by professors Weaver and Smucker.

Goshen's first summer research project for teacher training has proved thus far to be a real success. The visiting teachers find that this intensive research participation is a challenging professional refresher for them. At the same time they are providing valuable assistance in the research itself, and professors Henry Weaver, Jr., and Arthur Smucker, who direct the project, report excellent progress in the work they have outlined.

Coming from Ohio, Indiana, and Kansas, the four teachers are giving ten weeks this summer to share in this experience. Their salaries during this time are provided through a $6,145 grant from the National Science Foundation.

Lowell Knoop, Warsaw, Ind., and Carl Wertz, Stryker, Ohio, are working with Arthur Smucker in his effort to isolate the enzyme maltase. Although this enzyme is known to exist and some of its characteristics have been described, maltase itself has never been isolated for careful study.

To isolate this enzyme is a difficult and tedious task, but Smucker is "well pleased" with the progress that has been made through the help of these visiting teachers.

Working with Henry Weaver, Jr., are D. D. Driver of Hesston, Kans., and John Leffel of Bremen, Ind. They are making a study of the kinetics of fast reaction, seeking to measure the speed with which iron and thiocyanate react and the amount of energy involved.

Hundreds of separate operations are involved in an extended research project like the one being conducted at Goshen, ranging from the most complex to very simple tasks (such as washing test tubes).

Besides the four visiting teachers, four student assistants are also working under the direction of Weaver and Smucker this summer, making the research lab quite a busy and populous place.

Faculty Retreat

The school year at Goshen College does not begin with the flurry of appointments and conferences that characterize registration days. Before taking up these academic duties the faculty spends several days each year in spiritual challenge and refreshment at the Faculty Retreat.

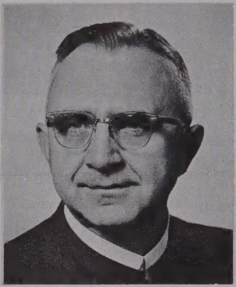
Faculty thinking will be stimulated this year through five major addresses on the theme, "The Decade Ahead."

Of special interest as well is a paper to be presented by Tilman Smith on "A Vision for Hesston College."

Little Eden Camp will again be the site for the Faculty Retreat, scheduled this year for Sept. 1-5.

PRESIDENT MININGER SAYS:

Christian Education Is a Work of God



CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, as we view it at Goshen College, is not a human enterprise but is a work of God. If we are to be effective, the Holy Spirit must be present in all phases of our college life. He must be present in the life and mind of the teacher during his preparation and as he confronts the students in the classroom. He should be present in the experience of students as they learn new truths and relate them to their previous knowledge. He should control the minds of administrators, faculty, and students as they plan and make decisions. Also, the Holy Spirit, alone, can create and maintain the kind of relationships among the members of the college community which will make Christian learning possible.

The Holy Spirit is present whenever and wherever men and women meet together in the name of Christ. Our spiritual effectiveness is dependent upon our faith in Christ, our openness to learn from Him, and our readiness to obey Him. The members of the faculty at Goshen College are earnestly seeking to become channels through which the Holy Spirit can work. We also endeavor to lead our students to a full commitment to Christ and to His Spirit during these decisive years of their lives.

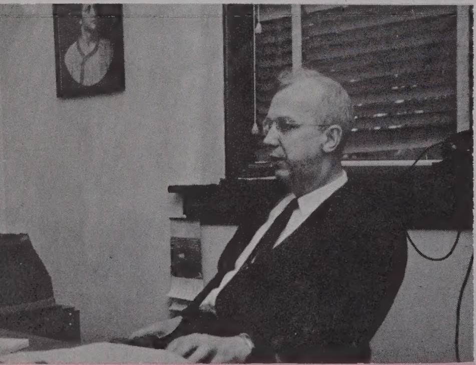
The Holy Spirit also works through us as we share our concerns with one another and pray for one another. We are depending upon our friends, alumni, and the parents of our students to pray for us as we enter upon the new school year. The opportunities are unlimited, the problems are often difficult, but God's resources are infinite. "Brethren, pray for us."

How One Alumnus Remembered Goshen College

ALUMNUS XY writes to President Mininger that he has spent his years in teaching and that he plans to retire "within the next several years." In the letter he says that he and his wife are planning "to make final disposition of our earthly possessions." The essence of their estate planning follows in the next paragraph.

By the terms of our wills we are setting up a trust fund for the benefit of Goshen College. After we are gone the earnings from this fund can be used by the college (a) to establish a chair or professorship in a given field, or (b) to establish scholarships for students who have shown unusual interest and proficiency, or (c) to create a loan fund for worthy and needy students now enrolled or to be enrolled at the college, or (4) for similar or other purposes.

The writer goes on to ask President Mininger to give reactions and suggestions. Both alumnus and wife do not want to proscribe a fixed or a rigid program. They desire to make provisions for changing times or discretion for executing the provisions they might make. Otherwise, "our well-disposed intentions might defeat themselves."



Dean Carl Kreider has been appointed editor of the NCA Bulletin for the year 1960-61. This official journal gives colleges and universities of the North Central Association an opportunity to share ideas and reports of new and creative projects.

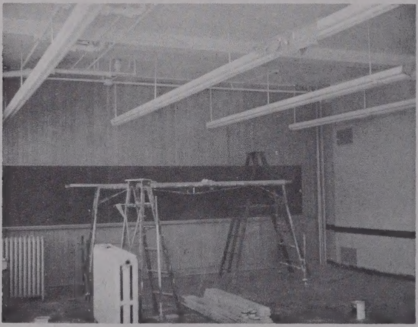
Cover: C. Z. Yoder Hall constitutes a major addition to the campus landscape. Its facilities house 200 men.

Changes in Coffman Hall must be seen to be appreciated. The old central entrance and stairway were removed and new ones built in each wing.



A new biology lab was built this summer up in Science Hall where the Art Department used to be.

CAMPUS FACE-LIFTING

SO MANY changes have been made on the Goshen campus this summer that even returning students may need help in finding their way around.

A new men's dormitory stands out there where the ball diamond used to be. Coffman Hall, formerly a man's domain, has been completely renovated and will be used for women's housing. Good old North Hall is still "for men only," but remodeling and a new coat of paint make it look much better.

Changes affect not only the living quarters but involve academic departments as well. The Mennonite Historical Library moved out of the Library building and into the new Seminary building. Into its place in the Library basement went a new Education reading room and curriculum library. This vacated the basement of Kulp Hall which in turn was reoccupied by Professor Ezra Hershberger and the Art Department. And instead of the Art Department on the second floor of Science Hall, you will now find a new biology laboratory.

So it goes. The noise you hear is progress.

Those huge ruts in the faculty parking lot are now hidden beneath a smooth coat of black-top. For construction and remodeling this has been the busiest summer in GC history.

KEEPING UP WITH THE ALUMNI

In Teaching

EMANUEL HERTZLER 38 has accepted a rather unusual invitation to help organize a new university center being developed near Detroit, Mich.

The University of Michigan is establishing this "Dearborn Center" with the help of a ten-million-dollar gift from the Ford family. Its curriculum, offered only to junior-, senior-, and graduate-level students, is designed to produce executives for business and industry.

Modern classroom and laboratory buildings have already been constructed on the 210-acre campus which was donated by the Ford family. The Dearborn Center is on a tri-semester plan and all buildings are air-conditioned to permit year-around operation.

Hertzler, formerly a professor of biology at Kent State University in Ohio, will have the opportunity of equipping the new biology laboratories, originating courses, and becoming head of the department as the institution grows.

At present he is doing preliminary study at Washington University and plans to take up his assignment at Dearborn Center beginning with the spring semester in February.

In Administration

WILBUR J. BENDER x25 has resigned his position at Harvard University as dean of admissions and scholarships to accept the post of executive director for the Permanent Charity Fund of Boston, a $40 million foundation serving greater Boston.

Bender has been associated with Harvard University for many years, first as a student in 1927-31, then as a member of the faculty and as dean of Harvard College from 1947-52.

Reviewing his career, a Boston newspaper reported that "he presided as dean over perhaps one of the stormiest periods in Harvard history. It fell to Bender to defend

This is one of the new buildings at Dearborn Center where Emanuel Hertzler will head the Biology Department.

Harvard against three charges: that she was interested only in superbrains, had terrible football teams, and was a hotbed of communism. And defend it he did. . . ."

As dean of admissions Bender had the difficult job of turning away many well-qualified students. This year, for example, he selected a freshman class of 1,402 from among 5,000 applicants. His advice to the other 3,600: "Forget this absurd idea that you can't go to heaven without an Ivy League education."

In Medicine

ELKHART COUNTY recently gained the services of three Goshen alumni who returned to work in different phases of medical practice.

Weldon Troyer 53, who received his M.D. from the University of Puerto Rico, took over Jonathan Yoder's medical practice in Goshen. The Yoders recently left for a term of missionary service in India.

Dale Kanagy 56, a dentist, is working with a Dr. Cleveland who has offices in Elkhart. Kanagy, a native of Gettysburg, Pa., received his professional training at the University of Pennsylvania.

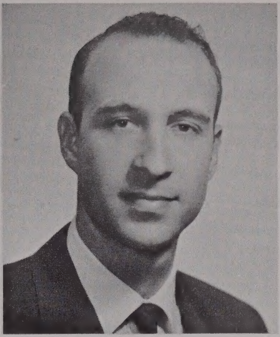
W. J. Zehr x55, a veterinarian, has joined the staff of the Goshen Animal Clinic. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois and came to Goshen after working for a year at the Tazwood Veterinary Clinic in Washington, Ill.

In Insurance

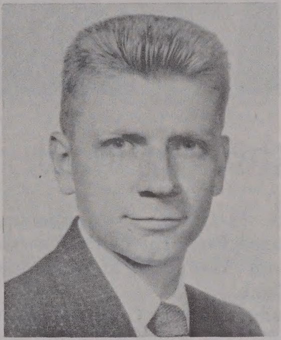
LEROY K. MANN of Grantham, Pa., has been appointed by the Pennsylvania Blue Shield as administrative vice-president of their doctors' care benefits plan, a program that has more than four million members in Pennsylvania.

A Goshen College graduate of 1950, Mann had been serving as general auditor for the Pennsylvania Blue Shield organization. He is a native of Chicago and attended Messiah College in Grantham before coming to Goshen.

He joined the Blue Shield staff as administrative assistant in 1952. Before that he had been controller at Messiah College and cost accountant for Modjeski and Master of Harrisburg, Pa.



A doctor, Weldon Troyer;



A dentist, Dale Kanagy;

And a veterinarian, W. J. Zehr, all started practice in Elkhart County in recent months.

Meet the President

DONALD G. MILLER of Middlebury, Ind., was elected President of the Goshen College Alumni Association at its annual meeting in June.

Donald graduated from Goshen in 1950 with a major in natural science and was subsequently enrolled in the Jefferson Medical School in Philadelphia, Pa. His year of internship was spent at the San Francisco Public Health Hospital in California, and then he returned with his family to Middlebury where he is now engaged in a busy medical practice.

Older alumni may remember Don as the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Miller of Goshen. His classmates will remember him as a good student, active in campus affairs. He was president of his class in his senior year, a member of A Cappella Chorus and Motet Singers, as well as a member of the Spartan Quartet.

Residents of Eastern Pennsylvania may remember him as the husband of Mary Lois Detweiler of Doylestown, Pa. They were married in 1951.

But whatever the memories, for the time being let him be known to old and young alike as President Donald Miller of the Goshen College Alumni Association.

He succeeds Lloyd Hartzler who served the Association as President from 1957-60.

J. C. Meyer—"His enthusiasm was contagious."

To Make a Life

"RETIREMENT to Dr. Meyer is like a commencement," wrote one of his former students after an interview with him last year. J. C. Meyer, a Goshen College graduate of 1916, had just completed 36 years of teaching at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, but he was not giving up his interest in education.

Leaving Western Reserve, he taught for a year at the Agricultural and Technical College in Greensboro, N.C. At this Negro college for men, Meyer was the only Caucasian on the faculty.

Now this fall he has been appointed as the John Hay Whitney professor in history at Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga. Spelman, a college for Negro women, is associated with Atlanta University.

This appointment from the Whitney Fellowship was arranged by the Retired Teacher's Foundation of Washington, D.C., whose director is Lloyd E. Blauch, a former classmate of Meyer's at Goshen College.

Professor Meyer's interest in education goes back a good many years. In fact, he was teaching at the age of 15 in a one-room school in Wayne County, Ohio. He recalls that at one time he had 46 children to whom he taught 40 subjects every day.

Soon he was teaching high school and before long he was principal of Rittman High, even though he had but fifteen months of high school and two summers of summer school himself.

At the age of 26, Meyer came to Goshen College. From here he went on to Indiana University for a master's degree and then to Harvard for another master's and a doctor's degree.

His teaching career took him to a number of schools, including a return to Goshen in 1919-21, when he was the head of Goshen's History Department.

What kind of a teacher is he? A former student from WRU says, "His enthusiasm was contagious. . . . Exemplifying his Mennonite background, he will be remembered for his simplicity, humility, and approachability. He taught and believed that making a life was more important than making a living."

Introducing the new

Menno Simons Scholars

EIGHT MEMBERS of the freshman class have been awarded Menno Simons Scholarships this year, according to a report from William Zuercher, Goshen's new assistant business manager and co-ordinator of student scholarships and student aid.

Only students with outstanding academic records are eligible for the Menno Simons awards, with applicants usually limited to those who ranked first or second in their high school graduating classes.

New this year is a co-operative arrangement with Hesston College where the Menno Simons program was recently inaugurated. Any student holding a Menno Simons Scholarship may now transfer between Hesston and Goshen and still receive full payment of the scholarship award.

These scholarships range in value from $400 to $900, depending upon the financial need of the student. They are paid in annual installments over the four-year period of college study.

Initial payments this fall to Goshen's eight new Menno Simons scholars totaled $2,050.

Besides high academic achievement, candidates for the Menno Simons Scholarships are also selected on the basis of (a) character, (b) contributions to church and community, and (c) performance on a special examination.

The National Merit Scholarship Test, administered among high school students throughout the nation, is currently being used in the selection of Menno Simons scholars.

Students are not only expected to maintain a fine academic record in high school but are also asked to continue the same in college. In fact, full payment of the scholarship is contingent upon the maintenance of a satisfactory record.

Geographical distribution of the new group of scholars is divided rather evenly between Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, with two from each state. In Ohio, the awards went to Janice Aeschliman of Stryker and Roseyn Rychener of Pettisville. Those selected from Indiana were Leah Beachy and Jon A. Yoder of Elkhart and Goshen, respectively. In Illinois the selection included Jon Smucker of Evanston and Joan Wittrig of Hopedale.

Iowa was represented with Carol Yoder of Parnell. And coming all the way from India was John Allen Beachy of Bihar, India, who returned to the States this summer with his missionary parents, John and Miriam Beachy.

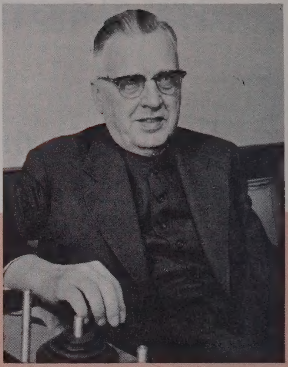
For Greater Usefulness

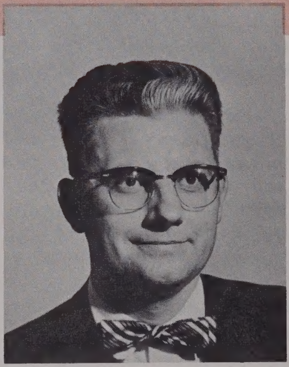
Evening and Saturday Classes Serve Churches and Communities of Surrounding Area

"Chorister Training"
by Dwight Weldy



"Psychological Aspects of Aging"
by Ernest E. Miller

"Romans and Corinthians"
by William Klassen



Evening and Saturday course offerings at Goshen College this fall show unusual variety. Through these 13 "off-hour" classes, the physical and intellectual resources of the college are made available to a wide circle of people, training them for greater usefulness in their churches and communities.

Among the courses this fall is a new one on the "Psychological Aspects of Aging." Teaching it is Ernest E. Miller, who spent the summer studying in the field under Dr. Irving Lorge at Columbia University in New York. He has also been active in local and state-wide planning and survey groups, and was elected, just last month, as president of the Elkhart County Council on the Aging and Aged.

Another course – "Chorister Training"—has not been offered at Goshen in recent years. But it is back in the schedule this year, with Dwight Weldy as instructor, and has attracted wide attention.

"Romans and Corinthians." is taught by William Klassen, one of several visiting professors involved in the evening classes. He is Assistant Professor of New Testament at Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Elkhart.

Other part-time instructors are: J. Naurine with "Introduction to Social Work," James C. Snyder in "Marketing Management," and Audrey B. Russel in "Guidance."

To help people understand what is going on in the world, Willard Smith has a class in "Current Affairs." Of practical value in other realms are Edith Herr's class in "Recreation," and Mary Royer's class in "Christian Education of Children."

As if all this were not enough, evening and Saturday students may also choose from: "Fine Arts" by Mary Oyer "Shakespeare" by S. A. Yoder, "Clothing for Homemakers" by Edna Shantz, and "Teaching Social Studies" by Perry Miller.

BURKHOLDER in Spiritual Emphasis Week

The Brinkmanship of the Kingdom

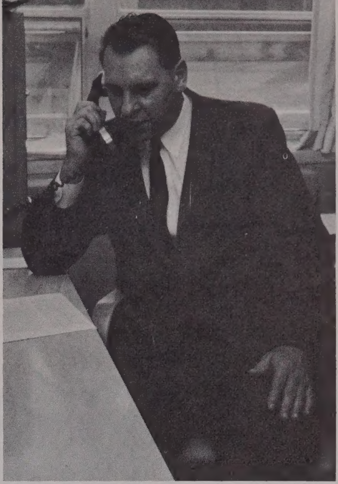
Limping but Destined

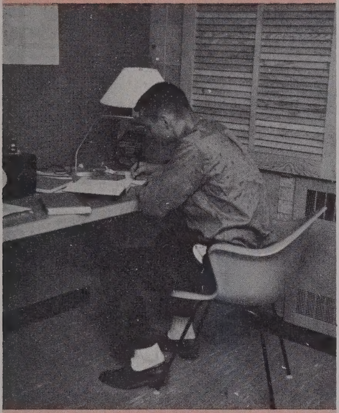
The Riddle of Inequality

THE YOKE OF CHRIST

All Is Yours

Early in the school year at Goshen College students are invited to face life's basic issues through a series of special chapel addresses. Called the Spiritual Emphasis Week, the series was presented this year, Sept. 27 to Oct. 3, by J. Lawrence Burkholder, professor of Bible and philosophy.





200 New Rooms

The rooms are simple and attractive, furnished with sturdy built-in furniture. Each student has a good-sized desk, equipped with a metal filing cabinet and a unique study lamp for diffused lighting.

Drawers and bookshelves form a floor-to-ceiling combination. There are also built-in bunk beds and several colorful chairs made of fiberglass.

Since curtains are always a problem in men's dormitories, these rooms have a pleasant and durable substitute—sliding louvered shutters.

RUSSIAN

The writing on the blackboard below may look like Greek to you—actually it's Russian. This is the second year that George Alexenko of Goshen, a part-time instructor, has offered a course in "Elementary Russian" at Goshen College.

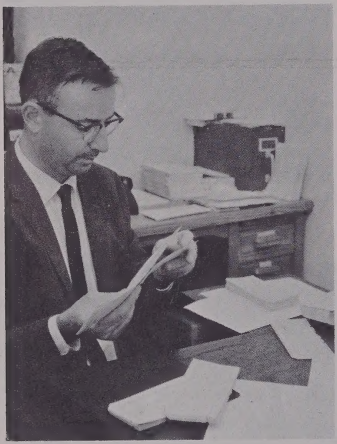
Discriminating Among Value Systems

In the midst of many pressures upon our colleges today, it is imperative that they maintain their integrity as institutions of "higher learning." This will mean that we become more selective in our admissions and retention policies.

With the increased demand for a college education, we are responsible to see that every space on our campus is filled by a student who is diligent in the pursuit of learning and who can profit from his college experience. At a time when it is popular to go to college, we must guard against making it easy.

In this period of cultural and moral crisis, our colleges have a responsibility to discriminate among the value systems competing in today's world. At Goshen College we seek to commit ourselves to those values which are an essential part of our Christian heritage. We must discover better methods of achieving this goal which will be consistent with the education of free men.

For the Record



1, 2, 3, 4. . . . J. B. Shenk, Registrar, begins his official count of Goshen's 1960-61 enrollment after registration is nearly complete on Friday, September 16.

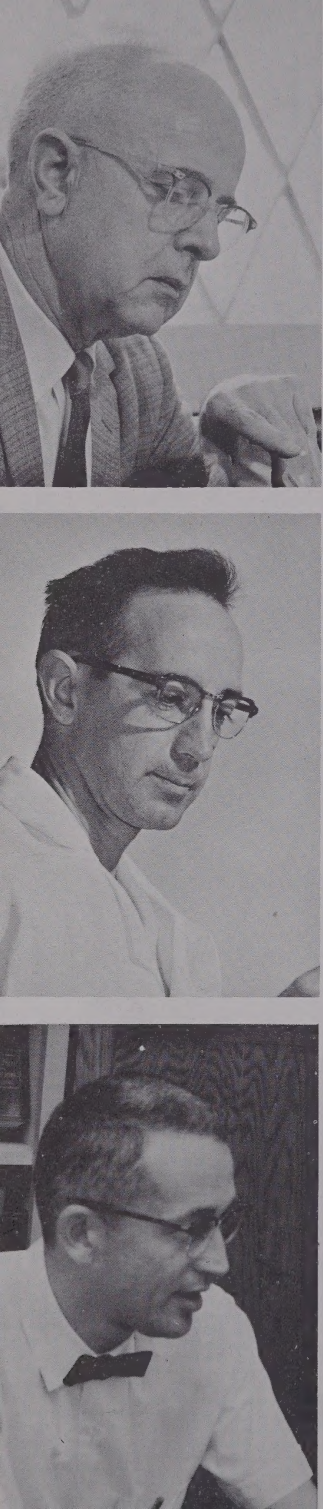
College Chemistry Research: PROGRESS



GOSHEN'S THREE MEN OF CHEMISTRY

Drs. Glen Miller, Arthur Smucker, and Henry Weaver, Jr., compose the faculty of this booming department. Dr. Miller has been a member of the GC faculty since 1925. Dr. Smucker, a Goshen graduate in 1949, joined the department in 1953 and Dr. Weaver came to Goshen in 1957. All three men are engaged in research as well as teaching.

PROGRESS means quality in higher education. For the Goshen College chemistry department quality and sudden advance into research have coincided.

This advance, evidenced by three current research projects, is primarily the product of a progressive spirit of experimentation, initiated in the early years of the chemistry department by Dr. Glen Miller. Dr. Miller has always carried on a one-man effort in search of new chemistry solutions.

This spirit of research not only solved teaching and chemistry problems but it also attracted two more men to the department. The increase of qualified men in the areas of organic, physical and biochemistry lightens the teaching load and allows for individual study.

These three men, Dr. Glen Miller, Dr. Arthur Smucker and Dr. Henry Weaver, each having a Ph.D. degree and previous teaching experience, are proving that research is more than a "must" for scientists; research is the essential for effective teaching and teacher motivation.

Recent grants to Drs. Smucker and Weaver from the Research Corporation, which is an organization set up to assist scientists of small colleges, have now been underwritten by the National Science Foundation to provide for continuation of the projects.

The NSF also grants funds for summer institutes, one of which Goshen sponsored this past summer, to arouse enthusiasm in the high school teacher and to improve his quality of teaching.

Dr. Smucker's problem concerns the process of isolating the enzyme, maltase, found in the intestine of pigs, and the isolation of the enzyme in pure form.

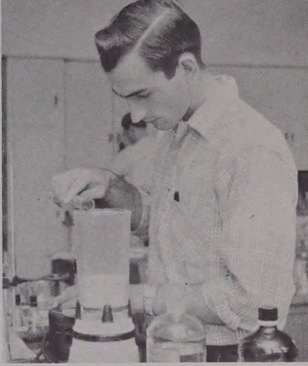
TWIN BENEFITS OF RESEARCH for students in the department are the advanced equipment which the research grants to faculty members buy, and the chance to participate in the work of the projects themselves.



Project two in pure research, which means study to understand fundamental concepts in chemistry, involves measuring the rate at which ions react. In this situation, Dr. Weaver must design or find a device sensitive enough to detect this lightning-fast reaction.

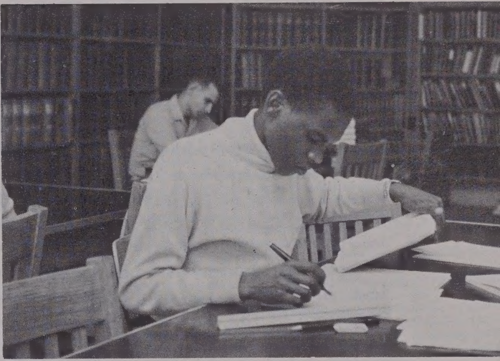
Working without a specific grant, Dr. Miller is producing new compounds to counteract cancer.

Evolving from the research studies comes improvement in class and laboratory procedures. Teacher enthusiasm, born in the research lab, convinces students to pursue theory and practice.

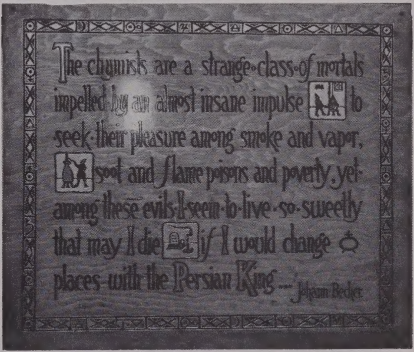
Furthermore, Goshen's profs also experiment with better methods of teaching chemistry. From these experiments have come more independent labs, and they benefit in efficiency, safety, and cost by using the micro method, which is doing experiments in miniature. Another factor, aiding the students, is the modern equipment made available for the entire department by the research grants.

These combination factors give a new dimension to research. Goshen students profit from the research-gained assets, usually found in universities, while maintaining the personal contact with professors available only in the small college. A Purdue professor has commented that graduate schools prefer graduates of the small colleges, with their background of research work and personal contact, to the graduates of their own undergraduate schools.

This is progress: progress towards quality that is extending throughout the college.



An African exchange student studies in the well-stocked chemistry reading room on the third floor of the Science Building.



The chymists are a strange·class·of mortals impelled by an almost insane impulse to seek·their pleasure among smoke and vapor, soot and flame poisons and poverty, yet·
among these evils·I·seem·to·live·so·sweetly that may I die if I would change places·with the Persian King — Johann Becher

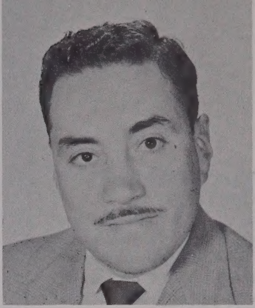
This creed of the chemist was written by Johann Becher, one of the early chemists. It stands at the end of the third floor hall as if to remind us that among other assets, the department also has a sense of humor.



Gabriel Coll

SMOOTHING THE PATH OF INTEGRATION

GABRIEL COLL of Haddonfield, N.J., says he is, "trying to apply a bit of the old GC spirit," as he helps smooth the way for migrating Puerto Ricans entering a new way of life in the United States.

Mr. Coll, graduated from Goshen College in 1947, is a community organizer employed by the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in the migrant division of the Department of Labor. "As far as I know," he says, "this is the first time in history that the government of a mother country has taken sufficient interest in those who have left the country to establish offices in another land to aid in the process of integration."

His own assignment is to stimulate Puerto Ricans to organize themselves into self-help groups. So far, he reports, 12 such organizations have been formed in the Delaware Valley (New Jersey and Delaware), where about 40,000 Puerto Ricans are now living.

In a published interview with a correspondent from the Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Coll explained that, "Even though we are citizens of the U.S.A., from a cultural standpoint we are Latins. The coming of a Latin group into an Anglo-Saxon culture creates frictions which we hope to iron out."

One small example of the difficulties involved is that in Puerto Rico there is no law against standing on street corners in groups. In many large U.S. cities, however, it is illegal. Both Puerto Ricans and the police officers need help in understanding the other's viewpoint.

Explaining the migration of Puerto Ricans to the United States, Coll describes it as a "push and pull" affair. He said, "We are being pushed off the island by overpopulation—2,350,000 persons, or 700 people per square mile. To approximate this density of population in the United States, the entire world population would have to be squeezed into this country. There are no mineral resources in Puerto Rico and only half the land is arable. That is the push.

"The pull is the expanding American economy."

Most Puerto Rican migration used to be "bottled up" in New York. But today Puerto Ricans fly directly to major cities throughout the country, he explained.

Pleasant Surprises

President Mininger received a note from the Goshen College School of Nursing some time ago, saying, "We had a pleasant surprise in our office this morning."

The pleasant surprise was a letter and check for $1,000 from a former student of Goshen College.

Both husband and wife in this Iowa family had attended Goshen more than 40 years ago. Their $1,000 gift to the School of Nursing was sent in on their own, without suggestion or invitation from the College.

Writing a note of gratitude to the family, a College official stated that, "the small church-related private college . . . is utterly dependent upon its friends and alumni for support." Many educational leaders are saying that the welfare of these schools depends upon the support of alumni and friends.

New Arrivals in BUENOS AIRES

SINCE SEPTEMBER, the seven million population of Buenos Aires, Argentina, has been increased by the addition of three Goshen alumni: Mario and Barbara Snyder, and Erma Zook, all from the class of 1952.

While this is no "population explosion," it is significant. The Snyder family is there to help start a new church in Villa Adelina, a growing suburb on the northwest side of Buenos Aires. Erma Zook is employed as a secretary at the American Embassy, although she too hopes to serve the expanding church in her spare time.

En route to Buenos Aires, the Snyders spent seven weeks in Puerto Rico, where they visited many of the churches. They also stopped for two days in Caracas, four days in Sao Paulo, and four days in Montevideo. They are under assignment from the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities in Elkhart, Ind.

Mario, a son of missionary parents, says it is good to be back "home" again. After graduation from Goshen College he served the Second Mennonite Church in Chicago for several years.

Villa Adelina, where the Snyders have located a pleasant six-room house, is about 10 miles from downtown Buenos Aires, a trip of 30 minutes on the fast train. They are about one and a half hours by train from the other Mennonite churches which are located along the mainline railroad running southwest.

The new and growing suburb where the Snyders are living is without an evangelical witness. Thus, it will be their job to help build the church, "starting from scratch."

In addition to the work in Villa Adelina, there are three families of believers living about 6 miles away. Mario hopes that "we may start services there."

As if this were not enough, a call for assistance has also come from a few Christians located about 65 miles south of Buenos Aires in La Plata. If possible, the Snyders hope they can lend a helping hand there as well.

One difficulty in such a widespread ministry is the problem of transportation. Buses and trains are so crowded that they report it is a "common sight to see people crawling in or out of train windows to assure themselves of a seat."

A car would seem like a logical answer to this difficulty. But automobile prices in Argentina are sky high. For example, a locally constructed Renault (built in a Kaiser plant), sells for $3,500. In spite of the financial difficulty, the Snyders hope to secure a car for their work.

Previous to her arrival in Buenos Aires, Erma Zook spent a period of time in Washington, D.C., for orientation. She also had the good fortune of passing examinations for the Certified Professional Secretary. Since only 285 passed the exam out of a group of 1,657 taking it, Erma was justifiably "thrilled and relieved" when she got the news. This is the tenth year for this CPS program and 1,996 secretaries are now certified by this organization.

Alumni Reunions

Regional meetings of Goshen College alumni were scattered from Pennsylvania to California during the past year.

In March, nearly 120 alumni from northeastern Ohio gathered in a church near Smithville to renew old acquaintances. Professor Mary Oyer 45 was on hand to give a report from the Goshen music department. She was joined by Lon and Kathryn 54 Sherer in a string trio presentation of Schubert's Trio in B-flat Major. Floyd Shore x40 of Louisville, Ohio, was elected president of this regional meeting.

During the month of April groups met in Boston, Mass., and Lansdale, Pa. The Pennsylvania group, numbering more than 90 persons, heard an address by Henry Weaver, Jr., of the College faculty, on the "Christian and the Scientific Sixties." Paul Brenneman 49, a doctor from Doylestown, Pa., served as chairman for the evening.

In Los Angeles, Calif., a group of 32 alumni met on July 16, for a fellowship dinner. Guest speaker for the evening was John Lederach x57, a minister from Hubbard, Oreg.

Personals

Mrs. Mary Gerig x19, wife of Orie B. Gerig of Chevy Chase, Md., died unexpectedly at her home on June 7.

Florence Bender 22, formerly the Ohio State Supervisor of Nursery Schools and a resident of Columbus, Ohio, is now living in Toledo, where she is Supervisor of Instruction for Aid to Retarded Children in Lucas County.

Mary Royer 30, of the Goshen faculty, spent a busy weekend in Ontario, Oct. 14-16, speaking five times in three days. Besides addressing a Sunday School Librarians' Workshop and an Elementary School Teachers Meeting, she also spoke to parents of preschool and elementary school children in regional meetings at Kitchener, Elmira, and Baden.

Lloyd Fisher 42 and family of Albany, Oreg., have gone to Paraguay, where Lloyd will help Mennonites in the Volendam Colony with their economic development.

Alfred E. Hoover 50, has been appointed an instructor in chemistry at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo.

Fred Speckeen 52, and his wife Esther (Stoltzfus) 56, are now living in Dubuque, Iowa, where Fred is Head of the Speech Department and Director of Forensics at the University of Dubuque, a Presbyterian college and seminary. Being an ordained minister, most of his weekends are spent in preaching assignments.

Looking for a way to spend a summer? Harold Schultz 53, according to our information, spent most of last summer in the Library of Congress. His alleged purpose was to compare agrarian politics followed in Canada and United States during the depression. Harold teaches history at Stetson University, DeLand, Fla.

Ruby Kauffman 54, who was dietitian at Goshen College during the absence of Phyllis Roose 46, plans to leave this month for a three-year term of service in Haiti, under the Mennonite Central Committee.

In Amman, Jordan, Gene Caskey 56, continues clothing distribution and relief service among the 158,000 Palestinian Arab refugees living on the east bank of the Jordan River. Although serving under Mennonite Central Committee, he is responsible on the field to the Near East Christian Council (NECC).

Wilmer Rutt 56, a June graduate from Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, is now interning at St. Luke's Hospital, Bethlehem, Pa.

Richard B. Yoder, a native of Salisbury, Pa., and a graduate of Goshen's college (56) and seminary (59), is currently pursuing doctoral studies at Hartford Theological Seminary in Connecticut. He was awarded the Hartzler Fellowship for advanced study. Yoder also holds an S.T.M. degree from Lutheran Theological Seminary in Gettysburg, Pa.

One of GC's 1960 graduates, Devon Yoder of Upland, Ind., is teaching chemistry and math this year in Tarsus, Turkey.

GOSHEN
COLLEGE
BULLETIN

Work to Give: the students did it again

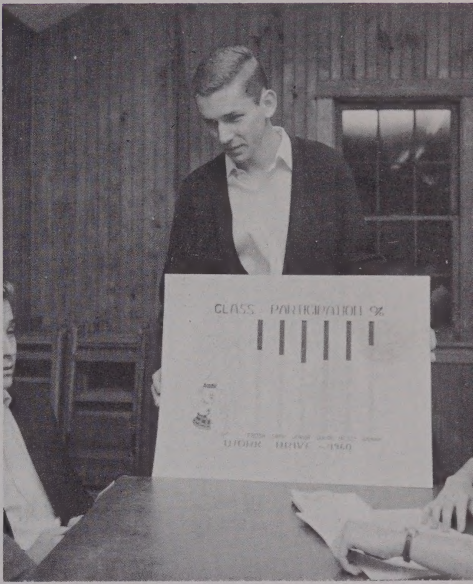
By working for two days this fall, Goshen College students (and faculty) were able to give approximately $9,500 to several campus improvement projects.

Eight hundred and forty-one students can do a lot of work in two days, and the list of positions and jobs involved is interesting indeed. One group of fellows, for example, organized a car-wash, and they each earned $24.00 during the two days.

Through advance planning with churches in the Archbold, Ohio, community, about 65 students were able to find employment there. Others worked in the Goshen area, at jobs such as building, farming, and house cleaning. Some stayed on campus, employed by the College in construction work and cleaning the dormitories.

The College Cabin, a gift from the graduating class of 1941, is located about a half mile from the center of campus and has been a favorite recreational area for picnics, outings, and other student events. With the money earned during these two days, the students plan to insulate the Cabin, install automatic heating, and build new rest-room facilities.

The Cabin grounds will be landscaped and a new pier constructed. In addition the Work Drive plan calls for development and landscaping of the Witmer Woods, a 13-acre tract lying between the Cabin and the campus proper. A number of trees and shrubs are also to be planted at other places on the main campus.

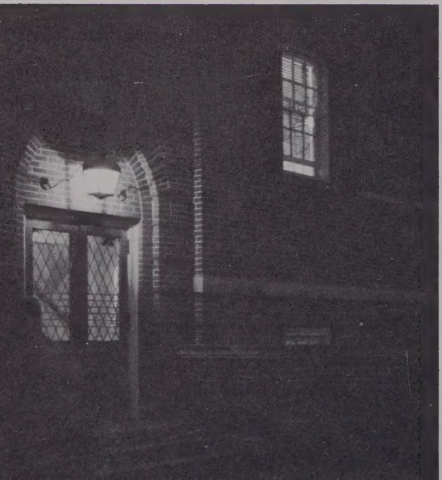


A party in the College Cabin climaxed the Work Drive effort. Student Chairman Robert Martin holds a graph showing class participation.

Work Drive money will go for improvements in the College Cabin and to landscape the area.

Under discussion here by Jim Stieman (left) and Professor Glen Miller is the $9,400 total reported at the Work Drive party.

THE CAMPUS AT NIGHT



Nighttime brings to the campus the glare of lights from the windows of laboratories, classrooms, or libraries, where students work hastily to complete assignments for the next day's lectures. The lighted rooms reveal that work is being pursued, that there are people involved, and that problems are being solved.

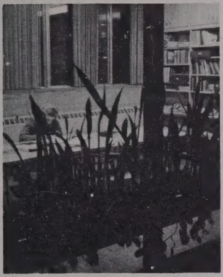
It is not the activity that is dominant in the student's life, but there remains the bigger factor of learning as a whole — learning above what is demanded in the routine.

The GC library (above and left) is a basic foundation in all the academic pursuits of the College. Perhaps it is best symbolized at night when the light inside is so obvious in the unlighted outside.

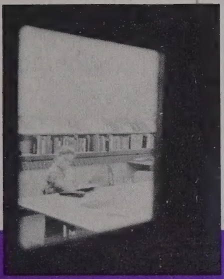
Hours of lectures pile up as do the notes, class papers, and requirements to be completed. These hours are converted into new understandings of the student and his surroundings. Readings lead into insights before unknown or produce original compositions in the case of music majors.

Understanding is achieved with

A premed student puts in some after-dark hours in the third-floor laboratories of the chemistry department, located in Science Hall.

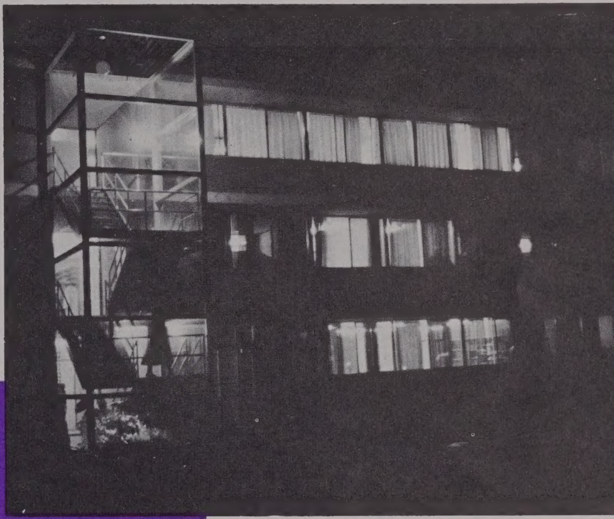


A home economics major studies in the department's reading room on the first floor of the Arts Building.



One of the present group of music majors at Goshen studies in the department's reading room on the third floor of the Arts Building.

Striking as any modern building is when lit at night, the Arts Building on the Goshen campus also reminds the students who have studied there at night of what is behind the patterns of lighted windows. The building houses the music, home economics, and nursing departments. The night this photograph was taken there were students busy in all three departments, as recorded in the photographs at left.



difficulty and at times presents itself as an overwhelming problem to be resolved only by conversation or conference with a professor. Often hours are spent late in the afternoon or evening behind partially opened office doors in search of the solution to a problem.

Learning does not bind in its theories or notes, but frees the mind and the individual to be creative and productive in his chosen field. The student's satisfaction arrives when he alone has produced a work or finished a task in understanding the community and its wants and needs. It is through this learning that a student can see himself in order to help others see and to live better. It is learning, gained not by repeated experience but in this case throught many pages, that advances the church, community, and man.

Behind these doors leading to music, or nursing, or home economics one discovers thought processes that turn over the problem, gain insight, and find the solution. Thinking that creates new tone scales and practical ways of work; thinking that asks much effort from the student to see beyond his own limits; thinking that stirs up new things which can not be found by the usual patterns of daily routine —this is the thinking that has absorbed the facts, and sorted them, and through realization has changed to meet what is new.

College study can perhaps be portrayed best by the lighted windows of the campus at night, for its influence is light in society.

1960 Missions Conference

The Unavoidable Commission

Goshen's Missions Conference opened on Sunday morning, Nov. 13, with a sermon entitled "The Unavoidable Commission," presented by Donald McGavran, guest speaker for the conference.

McGavran addressed students and faculty no less than seven times during his three-day visit to the campus. His final chapel message on Tuesday morning was taken from Matt. 25, "I Was Hungry . . . and You?"

Donald McGavran has become widely known in recent years for two challenging missionary books, The Bridges of God and How Churches Grow. At present he is director of a Graduate Institute on Church Growth at Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif. The son of missionary parents in India, McGavran returned in 1923 to spend many years as a missionary in India himself.

The Missions Conference ended on Wednesday morning when John Howard Yoder of the General Mission Board spoke about "A New Look at Missionary Vocation." Representatives of the General Board were available throughout the conference to counsel students interested in missions.

Year-End Giving

Internal Revenue Service is tightening up on the regulation of year-end giving. Regulation, Section 1.170-1, indicates that a contribution is deductible when paid. A check is deductible in the year it is given and mailed. It may be cashed in the following year, but must be written and delivered (or postmarked) in the year for which deduction is desired.

If you want your 1960 contribution to Goshen College to be deductible on your 1960 tax return, please issue your check on or before Dec. 31, and see that the envelope is postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Noteworthy Contributions

Goshen College received two large financial contributions in recent months, totaling more than $60,000.

Lilly Endowment of Indianapolis, Ind., has awarded Goshen $20,000 to increase library holdings and fill gaps in the present system.

Another $42,300 was received as a bequest from the estate of Almira Kohl, a former student at the Elkhart Institute (forerunner of Goshen College). Her gift is designated for use in a student loan fund.

In expressing appreciation for the Kohl bequest, President Mininger explained that gifts of this kind from alumni and friends fulfill a twofold purpose. They provide improved educational facilities for the college and they make it possible for needy students to attend college who might otherwise be kept from doing so.

Miss Kohl, who attended the Elkhart Institute from 1901 to 1903, was a long-time employee of the Martin Band Instrument Co., in Elkhart.

Faculty Recognition and Service

Members of the Goshen College faculty have often been recognized in the nation-wide professional organizations by being given places of responsibility.

A recent example is that two persons from the Teacher Education Department served last month on visiting teams sent out to evaluate colleges that are applying for membership in the NCATE (National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education).

Karl Massanari was chairman of a five-man team that visited Clarke College in Dubuque, Iowa, and Mary Royer was a member of the team that visited Monmouth College in Illinois.

A written report presented by the visiting team is one of the factors determining whether a college will be accredited by the NCATE.

Massanari's previous experience on NCATE visiting teams includes service at Wheaton College, Carthage College, Illinois Wesleyan University, and John Carroll University and Hillsdale College in Michigan. He is slated to head another visiting team next spring, which will go to Hope College in Holland, Mich.
